Risks and Benefits

* ‘There is something about the fact that Twitter is primarily designed for speech—for short, strong, declarative utterance—that makes it an especially powerful vehicle for activism, a place of liberation. Reading #YesAllWomen, and participating in it, is the opposite of warily watching a man masturbate and being unable to confront him with language. #YesAllWomen is the vibrant revenge of women who have been gagged and silenced.’

* When @gildedspine started #yesallwomen, it proved all that was great and wonderful in social media. And after? Well.” @kellybarnhill, August 13, 2014 - 7:28 A.M.

On the night of May 25, 2014, I curled up in bed and waited to die.

My Twitter mentions were bursting with reasons why I should. I was a man-hater. I was a rabid feminist. I was capitalizing on a tragedy. I was a terrorist in sheep's clothing. I was a hypocrite. There were many that had creatively utilized a 140-character limit to fantasize about particularly creative ends for me.

BARCC hopes that we can work together as a community to create a page that is a comfortable place for all survivors. We ask that everyone please be aware that any comments or posts that we believe to be inappropriate, overly detailed, or triggering will be taken down for the safety of all. This will be done in an effort to create a safe space for visitors to our page as well as to protect your privacy. Thank you for respecting this policy. As always, if you need to talk, our 24 hour hotline is available at 800-841-8371.

A rape survivors blog

I am a rape survivor, as part of recovering I need the opportunity to put what I'm feeling down on paper. This is the forum I have chosen to use. There is a guestbook below, it would be great to hear from you so please do feel free to leave a comment on either the guestbook or on a post.

About Me

Lizzie31_7

I don't know if anyone but me will ever read this but it makes me feel better to send it out there into cyberspace like a modern message in a bottle, get everything that's in my head out. The name of the blog says it all. I'm a victim of rape. I chose to put my blog on line because the first place I went to after I realized what happened to me was to the web trying to find something to help me understand what happened. If you have been a victim of rape/sexual assault or abuse believe me when I say you can get through this. Tell someone you trust. Go get help. Everything is going to be ok, maybe not for a while but someday.

3 Years On

Tomorrow is 3 years since it happened.

I have come so far and have my life back, I have a wonderful fiancé and the most beautiful baby boy however unfortunately I find that tonight I'm fighting a panic attack. I haven't needed to write in a long time but tonight I can't sleep and writing always helps me get everything out of my head. It reminds me that I'll always be living with this. At least now though I can live with it and I can honestly say I am a stronger person now. I also have an appreciation for what's important and most of all I have this beautiful little boy who I love more than I could ever explain so go away panic attack your not welcome in my head. I am surviving and thriving!

Guess what...I'm Pregnant!

I have the craziest most bizarre story, so in my last post I wrote about it coming up to 2 years since I was raped. On the day of the 2nd anniversary we found out I'm pregnant!

I was dreading the day and thinking, I just want it to be over, I was expecting a bad nights sleep the whole lot and I was feeling pretty down about it until.....

Myself and himself were talking and I realized I was late, I put it down to the stress of the time of year as I could feel my period coming. I had a test in my room so I said to him will I take one for the laugh, he had never seen one work before so he said yes, both of us completely relaxed as we were 100% sure I wasn't. So off I went and need on a stick and within seconds it came up positive. I was so shocked

Holly McNamara I wonder if eating pizzas gives as much pleasure as being in a relationship... If you looked at the science of it, I bet it would 😊😄

 Alysha Cleavin 99% of the time in my experience by the time you've texted a heap before meeting someone again the first time non sexual but flirty friendly ,by the time it's the 2nd encounter & you have had body language, convos, a drink ,and a taxi home you already can get a sense of consentuality between you and the guy or the two people if it's same sex. But most of the time kisses happen first & your in the hallway or near the bedroom and someone whispers shall we ? that's where you go yes or run for the hills and say no ! it's all about being aware of your surroundings and being present in the moment so you can consent or reject advances ! x my
